Tosha Sun (she/her) is a transracial adoptee who grew up in a small town in rural Wisconsin. She currently lives in Lexington and is a poet and artist. She is a co-founder and director of Levee, an artist collective fostering creative opportunities for women and femmes. Her passions are writing poetry, reading, history, folklore & mythology, stories, fashion, food, community care, and connection.

Prior to Levee, Tosha owned and operated two businesses in Wisconsin, one in retail and the other in food service. From 2012 to 2019, Tosha was the founder and executive director of Spindle Tree, a non-profit organization in WI that supported youth and young adults developing knowledge and their voices in conversations of racial injustices.
